Three Creeks Flood Bottom Lands Ruining Crops; Damage Estimated at Many Thousands of Dollars

Farmers of Wills Creek Valley Are Heaviest Losers

Hundreds of Acres of Grain Are Inundated -- Hay Crop Is Badly Damaged by Continued Rains -- Seventeen Mile Strip In Willis Creek Valley Covered by Water.

Damage to crops in Coshocton county by the heavy rains of the past four days, amounts to many thousands of dollars according to reports from different sections. Thousands of tons of hay have been ruined by the rains. Large fields of wheat, oats and corn have been either beaten down by the rain or washed out by the freshets of Wills Creek, Mill Creek, White Eyes creek and the Walhonding river.

Wills Creek went out of its banks Thursday night following the heavy rains and a stripe of bottom land one mile wide and almost seventeen miles long has been inundated since. Hundreds of acres of corn, wheat and oats are ruined and that section of the country suffered far greater damages than any other section. At a late hour last night Wills Creek was reported to be falling slowly. Dr. M. T. Moorehead, of West Lafayette, is one of the heaviest losers. About 75 acres of corn on his farm, south of Plainfield, is covered with water from Wills creek. About 25 acres of corn and 10 acres of wheat on the Welker farm south of Plainfield, are inundated and other farms in the vicinity suffered heavy loss.

This is the first time in many years that Wills creek has gone on a rampage at this season.

IN MILL CREEK VALLEY

Much damage was also done in the Mill creek valley. The creek left its banks Thursday night inundating many acres of corn wheat and oats. The meadows in many places are reported to have been badly washed and damage estimated at several thousand dollars resulted. It was reported last night that the creek was again in its banks and it is not thought that another rise will follow Saturday's heavy rain.

The Walhonding river was also out of its banks in the vicinity of Walhonding but the loss in that section is reported to be comparatively small. Corn hay and wheat were washed out in the vicinity of Nellie.

TUSCARAWAS RISING

The Tuscarawas river at Isleta Saturday night was reported to be bank full and at a standstill. The bottoms along this river, it is reported, were not inundated but if the rains continue it is feared that heavy damage will result. The gauge in the Tuscarawas river here registered the three foot stage Saturday night and the stream was rising slowly.

The weather forecast for today is "probably fair" and it is not thought that there is further danger of a serious flood.

Many believe that recent heavy rains have been due to the cannonading in Europe. This, however, is scoffed at by weather sharks throughout the United States. Weather experts explain that rain is always caused by air rushing up and meeting other air which is colder. When air cools there is likely to be clouds or rain. "But as for cannonading or shooting," one expert said, "you might as well try to produce a thunder storm with a popgun."

Property Owners Must Trim Their Trees Immediately

"If trees are not trimmed satisfactorily within the next ten days I am going to have them trimmed by the city," said Service Director Smith following numerous complaints by auto and jitney drivers.

"On Chestnut and Walnut streets the boughs hang so low that it is almost impossible for a coal wagon or automobile with the top up, to pass along the street. The jitney drivers have complained to me that the tops of their machines have been practically ruined as a result of boughs scraping them.

"The city will trim the boughs which overhang the streets and if the property owners are not satisfied with the looks of their trees, they can finish the job.

"This matter is covered by city ordinance and there is no excuse for property owners allowing their trees to remain untrimmed to the extent that they are a menace to traffic. On a certain section of Walnut street, the lower branches of the trees have been trimmed out and it improves the looks of the street considerably. In other sections of this street as well as many other streets in the city, the boughs hang so low that on a rainy day it is difficult for even pedestrians to pass along the sidewalks.

"There have been so many complaints recently that action must be taken at once so I am warning property owners to get busy within the next ten days or have their trees trimmed by the city."

THE AMERICAN FLAG

When Freedom from her mountain hight
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night
And set the stars of glory there;
She mingled with its glorious dyes
The milky baldric of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white,
With streakings of the morning light;
Then from his mansion in the sun
She called her eagle bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land.

Majestic monarch of the cloud!
Who rear'st aloft they regal form,
To hear the tempest-trumpings loud,
And see the lightning lances driven,
When strive the warriors of the storm
And rolls the thunder drum of heaven—
Child of the sun! to thee 'tis given
To guard the banner of the free,
To hover in the sulphur smoke,
To ward away the battle stroke,
And bid its blendings shine afar,
Like rainbows on the cloud of war,
The harbingers of victory.

Flag of the seas! on ocean wave
Thy stars shall glitter o'er the brave;
When death, careering on the gale,
Sweeps darkly round the bellied sail,
And frighted waves rush wildly back
Before the broadside's reeling rack,
Each dying wanderer of the sea
Shall look at once to heaven and thee,
And smile to see thy splendors fly
In triumph o'er his closing eye.

Flag of the free heart's hope and home,
By angel hands to valor given;
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us?
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us!

Tight Solons Are Excluded

Atlanta, Ga., July 3.—Hereafter if any member of the general assembly of Georgia becomes intoxicated he will not be allowed to enter the legislative halls. A standing rule was adopted today which provides that no member shall be admitted in an intoxicated condition. The doorkeepers are charged with rigid enforcement of the rule.

It is reported that the rule was adopted because of certain occurrences, but these reports are denied and the supporters of the rule declare it is aimed at no particular person or persons.

As state-wide prohibition is the law of Georgia, some members wanted to know how a legislator could get drunk without being a party to the violation of the law. The law is not enforced in Atlanta.

THREE FINED.

Charles Shafer, Bud Elliott and Edward Miller were each given fines of $5 and costs when they faced the mayor Saturday morning on charges of intoxication.

QUICK ACTION

Here is another interesting story about the most effective sales agency in Coshocton—The Tribune's classified page:

The real estate firm of McConnell & Karr inserted a "class ad" in Saturday morning's issue offering the Ross Lint property, on North Eighth street, for sale.

LeRoy Sheeley, well known member of the Coshocton fire department, spied the advertisement early Saturday morning and two hours later had purchased the property.

Federal Games Are Called Off --Wet Grounds

Owing to the swollen condition of the Tuscarawas river because of the recent heavy rains, the Red Sea diamond will not be in shape for the games scheduled with Springfield this afternoon and tomorrow and all games have been postponed. The diamond is so situated that when the Tuscarawas is above its normal stage, the diamond does not drain properly.

Bryan Takes His Big Desk

Washington, July 3—When Mr. Bryan resigned as secretary of state he could not bear to leave the huge desk in his office in the state department. Accordingly, he took the desk with him.

Mr. Bryan was greatly attached to the desk, chiefly because he felt it had a peculiar personal and historical value to him, inasmuch as his peace treaties were signed on it. Accordingly, he arranged to have a new desk the same size made to the order of the department, and the old one was sent to his home.

Dr. AND MRS. LOWER LEAVE.

Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Lower, of Walnut street, will leave today for Ann Arbor, Mich., where the doctor will take post-graduate work in the hospital and University of Michigan on diseases of the stomach and nervous system and methods of diagnosis.

There Will Be No Issue Of The Morning Tribune Tuesday Morning, July 6.

Unusual Operation Performed

Dr. L. C. McCurdy assisted by Dr. J. W. Shaw performed an operation for a diseased condition of the tibia upon Frank Finnel, the 11 year old son of S. B. Finnel, of Roscoe, early Saturday morning.

The lad is afflicted with osteomyelitis of the tibia and has underwent one or two operations before in an effort to secure relief. The bone was infected so that pus had formed and it was necessary to remove a strip of bone about a half inch wide the entire length of the bone, exposing the marrow, so that the infection might be remedied.

Busy Night With Police

Last night was Officer Hagans' busy night. No less than five offenders were discovered and "jugged" through the officer's vigilance. Detective Doney was also "on the job" and arrested two offenders while Davis added another bringing the total up to eight.

William Owens was caught with the goods on him after he had stolen a lap robe from the McConnell livery barn. He was apprehended by Officer Hagans and placed in the city prison. The robe was found in his possession and returned to the owners. He was also charged with intoxication.

Ben Moore, John and Samuel Bice were having a row near the corner of Third and Main streets and as their argument had reached blows, Officer Hagans felt that they might damage themselves so placed them in the "cooler" until the heat of their wrath should abate.

Another victim imbibed "not wisely but too well." He was John Strong. He was escorted to the station.

Two other plain drunks were picked up and lodged in the station to await trial. They were James Slasson, arrested by Officer Davis, and John Potter, arrested by Detective Doney.

Leslie Porter was arrested and taken to the station by Detective Doney on a charge of trainriding. He was released on bond to appear Monday at nine o'clock.

INSURANCE PAID

George N. Peacock, cashier of the American Insurance Union, Saturday paid to Mrs. John Goodin, of South Seventh street, $2500 on policies held by her late husband, who lost his life in an automobile accident several weeks ago. Two thousand dollars was on a regular life insurance policy and $500 on an accident policy.

Crazy Instructor Responsible For Bomb Explosion

After Setting Off Bomb In Capitol Building, Frank Holk Went To Morgan's Summer Home Where He Shot The Financier--Expiains Plan To Terminate War.

GLEN COVE, L. I., JULY 3.—Frank Holk, the Polish Cornell instructor, who was arrested here after he had shot and badly wounded J. P. Morgan early today, confessed that he was also the person who set off the bomb at the Capitol building just nine hours before Morgan was shot. He mapped out to the police the plan which had formed in his disordered brain, for terminating the European war and how he had first set off the bomb in Washington and traveled to Morgan's summer home here to complete the plan. "God was with me," he told the police. "I just had to do something to stop the war."

Morgan's condition tonight is regarded as much more serious than the reports of the attending physicians indicated.

After his arrest the police declared the would-be assassin had brought, besides two revolvers, a satchel containing six sticks of dynamite, a bottle of nitroglycerin and several fulminating caps.

WASHINGTON RESTS EASY

WASHINGTON, JULY 3.—Positive evidence was received by the police here tonight that Frank Holk, Cornell University professor, arrested following the attempted assassination of J. P. Morgan, was also responsible for the explosion of the bomb at the Capitol building. Officials had feared that it might have been the culmination of a deep-laid plot for the murder of certain officials. It is believed that Washington officials received their information concerning the identity of Holk, from New York by long distance telephone.

Safety First On The Fourth

Lest the celebration of the "Glorious Fourth" be unrestrained Monday, attention is called by the city officials to the following ordinance which will apply tomorrow as well as any other day in the year. The ordinance reads as follows:

"No person shall fire any cannon, gun, rifle, pistol, top pistol or firearms of any kind, or fire or explode any squib, rocket, cracker or Roman candle, or other combustible fireworks, or make use of any sling, within the city.

"No person, firm or corporation shall, within the city, sell, offer for sale, or have in its possession or custody any toy pistol, squib, cracker or Roman candle or fire balloon, or other combustible fireworks or any article for the making of a pyrotechnic display. Provided that nothing in this section contained shall be construed as to prohibit the giving of pyrotechnical displays of fireworks in public parks by written permission from the mayor and board of safety."

RECOVERS FROM OPERATION

Miss Bertie Shannon, of Locust street, will be removed from the city hospital Monday. She is recovering from an operation undergone two weeks ago.

IS IMPROVING

Mrs. G. H. Guthrie, of Walnut street, is recovering after an illness of several days.

Audit May Be Made by Commission

Formal application has been made by the City council and the Coshocton Gas Company to the state public utilities commission for an audit of the company's books by the commission's accountant.

The application was made to verify statements made to council by the gas company as to its financial condition upon which the company bases its applications for a franchise from the city council increasing its gas rate from 25 to 30 cents per thousand feet during the next five years and from 30 to 35 cents during the second five years.

The commission declined at first to consider the matter, saying that it was not in their field of activities. The commission is empowered to make investigations only in cases of a controversy, according to their statements, the commission has no departments authorized to make investigations of the kind asked by Coshocton.

Later, after an explanation by the city council that the company's claim had merit, it was declared that if the application was made in writing, action would be taken at its next meeting. The commission hesitated in granting the request of the local council because of the precedent it would set for action by other towns and cities.

Two Tanks Shut Down

Many of the employees of the glass plant left for various parts of the country Friday morning as the amber and green tanks at the plant were closed Thursday. It is likely that several of the men will not return as they will be supplanted by machines. One of the men said that they had been told that more machines would be installed until there would be six machines on each tank. It is said that this will cut down the number of journeyman blowers from 110 to 38.

HOME DECORATION

The average American house should be a comfortable abiding place. The inviting reception hall should be planned and decorated so that visitor may be impresesd with an atmosphere of hospitality. The living room should be a combination of the parlor and the sitting room. Its walls and floor covered with appropriate coverings and the furniture should be such that it may be used by every member of the family every day in the year, without fear on the part of the housewife that scratches will show and colors fade. The dining room should be furnished in a quiet way. Nothing should be permitted in the kitchen which is not of actual use. The bedroom should be planned so that air and sunshine may reach every corner. The entire house should show proper decoration. However, there is a variety of opinions as to what is bad in decoration but there must be a common meeting ground and that of common sense is a safe one. Common sense as applied to home decoration includes the four basic principles of all good decoration, namely color, line and design, simplicity and appropriateness.

"Home Decorations" is the title of one of the Agricultural College Extension Bulletins that may be had on asking.

FEED THE COLT.

Some farmers (but probably none in this country) believe that since it will make up as a horse the growth that it does not take as a colt. As a matter of fact a colt, or any other young animal, that is not kept growing is very likely never to become as large and strong as it would have been, had it thrived while young. The colt should receive the proper kind of feed and be fed liberally. The feed should be nutritious and palatable. Among the best colt feeds is fresh pasture grass. This should be supplemented with oilmeal, corn, oats, bran and alfalfa or clover hay.

Where it is possible to do so the colts should be kept in the stable away from flies during the day, given all the alfalfa or clover hay they will eat, and one pound of the following grain mixture to each one hundred pounds of colts: 6 pounds of oats or corn, 3 pounds of bran, and 1 pound of oilmeal.

FUNERAL HOUR CHANGED

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Sarah DeCoursey will be held at the Tyndall church Sunday afternoon at two o'clock instead of ten o'clock as previously announced. Rev. R. M. Fanbion will have charge of the services.

THREE ARRESTED

Edward Miller, Charles Schaeffer and John Doe were arrested Friday night on charges of intoxication. They will be arraigned before the mayor this morning.

ATTENDED CONFERENCE.

Capt. Fred Ladlow of the Salvation Army, returned home Friday from Dayton, where he attended a conference of the Army.

Mrs. C. H. Glover will leave this morning for Cincinnati to spend the Fourth with Carol and Clark Simmons of that city.

Victim Still Unconscious

At a late hour last night Ethel Maston, the fourteen year old daughter of George Maston, a New Guilford farmer, was still unconscious as a result of injuries sustained Thursday afternoon when she was struck by lightning. Unless congestion of the brain results, it was said Thursday night, that she would in all probability live although she may be paralyzed.

VETCH SEED.

The growing popularity of hairy vetch is indicated by the importation of seed increasing from 100,000 pounds in 1906 to 2,000,000 in 1914. This seed almost all came from Russia and Germany. On account of the European war practical all importations of vetch seed been stopped. The specialists in the United States Department of Agricultural recommend that farmers in this country save their own hairy vetch seed. This valuable crop is grown with rye and wheat and should yield from three to ten bushels of seed per acre in addition to the wheat or rye.

Some farmers in Ohio have grown vetch seed very successfully and find that it is a profitable crop as the seed sells from $5 to $7 per bushel.

Miss Bess Laub, of Newcomerstown was in Coshocton, Friday to attend the races.

A delightful afternoon party at the home of Mrs. C. B. Howell on South Fifth street, Saturday served to announce the approaching marriage of Mrs. Howell's niece, Miss Estella Myers, of Blissfield, to Mr. Le Masters, of Canton.

The hours for the party were from 1 to 3 and dinner was served in the dining room which had been made unusually attractive in honor of the occasion. Independence Day suggestions were used in the decorations, red, white and blue predominating. Originally was disguised by the manner of making the announcement, giant hour glasses which marked the hours for the guests, containing cards with the description, "Myrtle—Masters—August 21." The table was centered with a large birthday cake, the day marking the engagement birthday anniversary of the bride-elect as well as the announcement of her engagement. Covers were laid for: Miss Myers, of Blissfield; Miss Pearl Phillips and Miss Edith Johnson, of New; Miss Ruby Beall and Miss Zella Thompson, of Warsaw; Miss Bessie Fry, of Keene; Miss Lula Lanning and the hostess.

A THOUGHT FOR INDEPENDENCE DAY

There are a few documents in the possession of mankind that are so universal in their application, so firmly bedded in the eternal verities, that they form standards by which the acts of succeeding generations may be tested and measured.

Such a document is the moral code embodied in the Sermon on the Mount. Though the world stand forever men will need no further message for their moral guidance. They will need no other Word to quell passion, silence the tongue of scandal and hatred and entreat them to deal with their fellowmen as they would be dealt with.

Such a document is Magna Charta. The Bill of Rights which the commons grudgingly wrung from old John at Runnymede seven centuries ago is still the bulwark of civil rights throughout half the civilized world. And so long as the cause of human liberty shall need a champion, Magna Charta will stand like a flaming beacon, pointing the way to the complete emancipation of the race.

Such a document is the Declaration of Independence. For nearly a century and a half it has been the high water mark of political liberty, the guidon for nations struggling up the thorny path of Human Justice, a banner of hope for the oppressed in every land, the goal which, in God's own time, will mark the attainment of those inalienable rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Our responsibilities are measured by our talents. To whom much is given from him is much expected. We often hear men express astonishment that there should be agitation and complaint and discontent with us. "Is not labor better paid in America than elsewhere," they say? "Are we not the heirs of all the ages? Why then, should our people not be willing to let well enough alone, to be satisfied with what they have without striving ceaselessly for the unattainable, to accept things as they are?"

Such has been the plea of Privilege throughout all the ages. Such was the plea of British and American Tories at the outbreak of the Revolution. Such was the plea of the Privileged Classes when LINCOLN arose on the horizon of Time and the Clock of Fate struck the final hour of human slavery.

When America measures up to the Declaration of Independence will political agitation cease and industrial discontent be no more. When our lawmakers hold before them in their every deliberation the immortal truths embodied in this, America's Bill of Rights, will there be an end of complaint. When our every governmental policy can be submitted to the acid test of this greatest of political Declarations will unrest disappear.

When the taxing powers of this Republic have been wrested from Monopoly; when the last law Privilege has written on our statute books has been erased; when the right of every child to childhood's birthright of decent environment and freedom from abnormal toil is guaranteed; when our boasted slogan of "No taxation without representation" is vouchsafed to the mothers of America and the last restriction has been removed from the priceless gift of suffrage; when "Equality of Opportunity" has become more than an "iridescent dream;" and when DEMOCRACY has driven its foes from the last trench in America, then, and not until then will America no longer know discontent.

We are indeed the heirs of all the past. We admittedly have more to be thankful for than the nations around us. But in the measure that we have been preferred over other peoples, in the same measure is much demanded of us. Our talents are many, but they must be returned fivefold and tenfold in the same proportion that Infinite Wisdom has blest us with every material gift.

INDUSTRY
By Walt Mason

How doth the busy little bee improve each shining hour! It honey takes from every tree, and keeps it till it's sour. Ah, nothing hinders, nothing queers its labors here below; it does not always cock its ears, to hear the whistle blow. Whenever honey is on tap, you see the bumbler climb; for shorter hours it doesn't scrap, nor charge for overtime. It's on the wing the livelong day, from rise to set of sun, and when at eve it hits the hay, no chore is left undone. And when the bumblebees are possessed of honey by the pound, bad boys come up and swat their nest, and knock it to the ground. The store they gathered day by day has vanished in a breath, and so the bees exclaim, "Foul play!" and sting themselves to death. There is no sense in making work a gospel and a creed, in thinking every bee will spoil that knows no useful deed. No use contending with the sun, and making life a strain; for bees and boys need have some fun if they'd be safe and sane.

MORGAN SHOT BY WAR CRANK

Wounded Twice Before His Assailant Is Overpowered.

New York, July 4.—Declaring that J. P. Morgan, the banker, is responsible for the continuation of the European war, a man who is believed to be insane, shot the financier at his summer home at Glen Cove, Long Island. Two wounds were inflicted, both of which were slight, one in the breast and the other in the leg.

The prisoner is believed to be of German nationality, although he claims to be an American citizen. He speaks with a marked German accent. The prisoner was locked up here and is held up pending his removal to the county jail at Mineola. After his arrest he raved about the war, declaring over and over that Mr. Morgan could end the war if he wanted to.

The police declared that the would be assassin had brought, besides two revolvers, a satchel containing six sticks of dynamite, a bottle of nitroglycerin and several fulminating caps.

The man, who later asserted that his name is F. Holt and that he lately was an instructor in French at Cornell university, arrived on an early train upon the Long Island railroad and approached M. F. Ford, who operates a taxicab service in Glen Cove.

"I want to be driven to the residence of J. P. Morgan," said the man. "I want you to take me there quickly, for I am in a big hurry."

The man was well dressed and Ford's suspicions were in no wise aroused by the request. The distance to "East Island," the Morgan country place, which is almost surrounded by water, was quickly covered. When the Morgan place was reached the stranger got out of the cab and as he paid his fare he remarked to the taxicab driver: "This is the man who is responsible for the European war," at the same time pointing toward the palatial mansion nestling among the trees.

Passing up the driveway the visitor rang the bell, which was answered at once by a butler. "I wish to see Mr. Morgan at once," said the man. As an after thought he added, as though to insure his seeing the banker: "It is very important."

The servant disappeared, but after a moment returned, saying: "Mr. Morgan regrets to say that he can not see you because he is very busy."

This roused the stranger's anger. "Won't he see me?" he snarled, drawing a 38-caliber revolver from his pocket. "He will see me. He is responsible for this war and it has got to stop. He is the man who can stop it."

Hits Morgan Twice.

The butler upon seeing the weapon gave a shout of fear and Mr. Morgan who was reading in his library at the time, hurried out to ascertain the cause of the commotion. As Mr. Morgan appeared the butler, mastering his fear, grappled with the assailant, who was shouting: "I can not help I must see Mr. Morgan. This war has got to stop. It has gone too far now. I've come here to serve my country."

In the scuffle the weapon was dropped, but the would-be assassin, breaking the butler's grip, drew another pistol, a 32-caliber weapon. "Help my country," he shouted at the financier, who had stopped short at the sight which greeted his eyes.

Before Mr. Morgan could say anything the man began to fire. One bullet struck Mr. Morgan in the leg, inflicting a flesh wound, and the other struck him in the side. The financier retained his presence of mind and started forward for his assailant. The noise had aroused the household and servants were pouring in from all directions. Even the housemaids took part in overpowering the man.

The butler had picked up a heavy brass coal hod, which he hurled at the stranger, striking him in the forehead and knocking him down. In the meantime, Mr. Morgan, not knowing how badly he was hurt, he staggered into his library and collapsed in a chair.

While some of the servants were telephoning for Dr. William H. Zabriski and for the police, others were caring for the financier, and still others were trussing up the prostrate man, who was now confidently believed to be an anarchist.

When Dr. Zabriski arrived he made a hasty examination and immediately assured the family that Mr. Morgan's wounds were slight and that no fears need be felt.

Constable Frank McCahill arrived and took charge of the prisoner. The stranger, his face and clothes covered with blood from the cut in his forehead, was in the hall of the Morgan home, shouting at the assembled servants who glared back at him. "I was [illegible] to this," screamed the man. "Nobody helped me. I am an American. [illegible] I am willing to pay with my [illegible] for what I have done."

OBITUARY.

"Be noble and the nobleness that lies in others, hidden but never dead, will rise in majesty to meet thine own."

How beautifully was this thought exemplified in the life and character of Mrs. Louisa Hagelbarger, of Spring Mountain, who departed this life Saturday evening, June 25.

Her noble influence was felt not only by her own family of eleven girls and boys, but all with whom she became associated were influenced for the better by her life and example.

She had that simple, childlike faith that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord and obey his will. That was her guiding star in life.

How often she repeated those tender words, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He leadeth me into green pastures and beside the still Waters." When it came her time to pass through the dark valley, she left this life as calmly as one who lies down to "pleasant dreams."

There were twenty grand-children and two great grand-children. She was one of a family of [illegible], only one of whom is living, M. V. [illegible], of Jacksonville, Fla.

Her girlhood days were spent [illegible] township, but when quite young, she and one or two [illegible] came to Spring Mountain [illegible]. It was here she [illegible] the greater part of her life [illegible] and loved, and [illegible]. Here her life became [illegible] to all.

[illegible] last days, she wished [illegible] talk again with all [illegible] and neighbors, but [illegible] that her [illegible] strength [illegible] allow it. Reproduce Pageant of Civil War

Washington, D. C., July 2.—Fifty years ago the victorious Union armies, fresh from the battlefields of the Civil war and the surrender at Appomatox, marched down Pennsylvania avenue in Washington.

It was a grand review of the war-scarred legions of Grant and Sherman, of Meade and Sheridan, and the other famous commanders whose "boys in blue" had preserved the Union. President Johnson and General Grant were in the reviewing stand as the veterans swung proudly past to the exulting music of their bands, while the battle flags that had flown on a hundred bloody fields waved over the triumphant host.

This thrilling pageant, of national interest, will be reproduced as far as possible during the forty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will be held in Washington, September 27-October 3, next, according to the announcement made here today.

It will be the fiftieth anniversary of the Grand Review. Thousands of the same veterans who marched in that review a half century ago uniformed in the Union blue, will again keep step to martial music down Pennsylvania avenue, and pass in parade before President Wilson and members of his cabinet. It will be the last time the veterans will march in Washington, and the last time that hundreds of them will ever again attend an encampment, as the aged men are fast passing away.

The Grand Army, which survived four years of campaign and never surrendered, will soon have to lower its standards, defeated by Time, the only enemy able to vanquish the veterans. Because of the increasing death rate and the feebleness of the survivors of the great war it is probable that the Grand Army will never again hold great encampment after the Washington event. As this gathering is the last in which many of them will participate, and as the anniversary of the Grand Review is of such historic significance to them and the country, they will make great efforts to be in Washington in September. The encampment will therefore be the largest and most successful ever held by the organization.

Washington is making elaborate preparations to receive the veterans, and the Nation's capital will be en fete during the week that the heroic soldiers are within her gates.

Government officials and the people of the Capital are a unit in extending invitations, through the press of the country, to the nation to visit Washington during G. A. R. week. Plans are being perfected to make the encampment and the Grand Review an event of national importance.

An elaborate program of entertainment for the veterans and visitors who visit the capital at that time is being prepared. The War Department and the Navy Department are co-operating in the program.

The former has arranged for exhibition drills of U. S. troops, cavalry, artillery, and infantry, at Fort Myer, which is a suburb of Washington. Some of the best soldiers in the Army are stationed at Fort Myer, particularly the cavalry, which numbers among the enlisted men many of the greatest riders in the world. Crack batteries of light artillery are also stationed at Fort Myer. Aeroplane exhibitions are to be given by the Signal Corps. The Wright brothers demonstrated in public the first aeroplane at Fort Myer.

The Navy Department will have a fleet of torpedo boat destroyers, submarines, gunboats, and a cruiser detached from the Atlantic fleet and sent up the Potomac river to Washington, where the ships will remain during the encampment. A big feature will be camp fire, at which will be held reunions of the various corps of the Union armies.

Just below Washington, on the Potomac, is located Indian Head proving ground, where big guns for the navy or fortifications are tested before being placed on battleships or in our coast defenses. The veterans and visitors will have an opportunity to see the operations at Indian Head, as well as scores of other places of interest in or around Washington.

During encampment week opportunity will be afforded the veterans to revisit Bull Run, Antietam, Appomattox and other celebrated battlefields.

General Orozco Missing.

El Paso, Tex., July 4.—Pascual Orozco, who, with General Huerta, has been under surveillance for the United States authorities, was believed to have disappeared. He was not in his house, where six men have been guarding him. The authorities, however, have not yet abandoned hope of recapturing him if he attempts to escape across the border to Mexico.

SON OF STEAD SLAIN.

Cablegram to Relatives Says He Was Assassinated In Rumania

Chicago, July 4.—Alfred Stead, son of the late journalist, W. T. Stead, apparently has been assassinated in Rumania, according to a telegram received here by his brother-in-law, Frank R. Hussey, advertising manager of the Evening Post.

The cablegram, sent from England, was signed by Mr. Hussey's sister, Mrs. Mary Elaine Stead. It reads: "Alfred assassinated little hope I going Rumania."

The absence of punctuation marks in the cablegram made it impossible for Mr. Hussey to get its precise import. "My brother-in-law was in the diplomatic service of Great Britain for many years," said Mr. Hussey. "He acted as Rumania consul in London, but six months ago went to Rumania. He was interested in oil wells there."

Nearly Million For Art Gallery.

Manchester, N. H., July 4.—A bequest of nearly $900,000 is made by the will of Mrs. Hannah M. Currier, widow of Former Governor Moody Currier, to establish an art institute in this city, to be known as the Currier Gallery of Art. The estate is valued at nearly $1,000,000, and outside of a few thousand dollars to relatives and $100,000 outright to her companion, Nellie W. Snow, will be devoted to the art institution.

Ireland In Big War.

London, July 4.—John D. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, speaking at Dublin, said that up to June 16 126,711 Irishmen from Ireland had joined the army. Redmond stated that of those who have enlisted upward of 70,000 are Catholics and some 21,000 are enrolled members of the Irish National Volunteers.

Wouldn't Play Cave Man.

Cleveland, July 4.—David Baker, married six months, summing up his views of the marital discord which led him to file suit for divorce, said: "She wanted cave man love. She wanted to be brought to the foot of her lover by brute force. She would have crawled back to me and loved me if I had struck her. But I wouldn't play the cave man, so I lost her."

Our Reason

For getting up the delicious blend of Tastwel Coffee was because we believe the people were demanding a better quality than they were getting in the ordinary run of package coffee, and our steadily increasing sales of Tastwel are substantial proof that our reasoning was correct.

It is evidently better, more economical for the consumer to pay a slight increase in price and get a coffee that leaves a good taste and satisfying farewell than to buy an inferior grade at a little less and have that dissatisfied feeling which unfits one for their day's labor.

Warnings to Housewife

Washington, July 3.—The department of agriculture today sounded an alarm against "eggless noodles."

"If noodles were sold merely for ornament," says the department official bulletin, "it might make little difference to the purchaser whether the yellow in them came from an egg or from a dye, but when considered as food, whether they contain any eggs, or enough egg to be of value as food, is important."

Hence, the department is struggling with the problem of drawing the "egg noodle" and the "eggless egg noodle."

The housewife is also warned against "waterac macaroni" Wall street not guilty.

"Water added to expensive macaroni and sold at the price of macaroni is even more profitable than dyed dough at the price of egg noodle," says the department.

Coyote Caught In Washington

Washington, July 3.—A coyote, caught in the heart of Washington last night, is at police headquarters awaiting an owner. The zoo informed the police that all the coyotes belonging to it were accounted for.

The capture of the animal was due to Colonel John S. Mosby, of Confederate fame, who was at work at his home on his memoirs when he heard a cry familiar to him from service on the western plains. He told the police a coyote was loose, and they lassoed it.

No Violation Of Neutrality

Washington, July 3.—No intentional violation of neutrality was involved in the advertisement of a Cleveland, O., machine company relating to the manufacture of poisonous shells.

The department of commerce announced today that its investigation showed that the company in question does not manufacture explosives of any kind, but merely makes machines capable of use in the production of shells and ammunition. The department holds that the confusion was the result of unfortunate wording of the advertisement.

GERMAN REPLY TAKEN TO KAISER

Will Be Opinion of the Whole German People.

Berlin, July 4.—Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg left for the kaiser's headquarters in Galicia with the completed text of the German reply to the second American note. If it meets with the emperor's full approval, the communication probably will be delivered to Ambassador Gerard on Monday.

The German reply is not the mere answer of German diplomats. It may be considered to represent the opinion of the whole German people regarding her submarine policy.

During the time it was under consideration by the foreign office and marine, several prominent German editors, bankers and business men were called in and asked to express their views. These gave full approval to the stand the imperial government takes.

The final draft as completed meets the most optimistic forecasts. One who saw the text declared that Germany is willing to safeguard the lives of neutrals crossing the ocean even aboard belligerent ships, if such vessels do not carry ammunition and do not misuse the American flag. Germany will not give up her submarine policy. But she is willing to modify her methods to that extent.

The afternoon contest will be a medal contest with the cup going to the holder of the best score. Announcement was made Saturday that the list of handicaps would be posted in the locker house at nine o'clock Monday morning.

The local golfers will go to Zanesville on Thursday, July the eighth, for a match game. This will be the second of the season's match games for the local club.

To Sell Grocery Stock of Goods

A writ of attachment was issued Saturday from Squire W. M. Wimmer's court against Arabella Seedle, who conducts a general store on Walnut street in the Standen hotel building, to satisfy claims. The goods attached were appraised at $278.94 and will be sold at public auction by Constable Alex Swartz on the tenth of July.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER ... [illegible]

"All ... [illegible] ... reminiscences ... [illegible]

She came directly ... [illegible] ... There was ... It was as if she realized this moment ... [illegible]

Frederic ... [illegible] ... steady gaze. His father ... [illegible]

"Y... this is Frederic, my dear," he said, with ... a trace of warmth in his voice. As she withdrew her hand from Frederic's clasp, James Brood extended his. "How are you, Frederic?"

"Pretty well, sir."

They shook hands in the most perfunctory manner.

"I need not ask how you are, father," said the son, after an instant's hesitation. "You never looked better, sir."

"Thank you. I am well. Ah, Mrs. Desmond! It is good to be home again with you all. My dear, permit me to introduce Mrs. Jane Desmond. You have heard me speak of my old comrade and—"

"I have heard you speak of Mr. Desmond a thousand times," said his wife. There may have been a shade of emphasis on the prefix, but it was so slight that no one remarked it save the widow of John Desmond, who had joined the group.

"Will you go to your room at once, Mrs. Brood?" asked Mrs. Desmond. The new mistress of the house had not offered to shake hands with her, as James Brood had done. She had moved closer to Frederic and was smiling in a father shy, pleading way, in direct contrast to her manner of the moment before. The smile was for her stepson. She barely glanced at Mrs. Desmond.

"Thank you, no. I see a nice, big fire and—oh, I have been so cold!" She shivered very prettily.

"Come!" cried her husband. "That's just the thing." No one spoke as they moved toward the library. "We must try to thaw out," he added dryly, with a faint smile on his lips.

His wife laid her hand on Frederic's arm. "It is cold outside, Frederic," she said; "very cold. I am not accustomed to the cold."

He was prepared to dislike her. He was determined that his hand should be against her in the conflict that was

"But I Shall Not Be a Stepmother," She Said, Quickly.

... [illegible] ...

"... shall do our best to keep you warm," he said quite easily, and was ... that astonished at himself.

They had preceded the others into the library. James Brood was divesting himself of his coat in the hall attended by the ... old men. Mrs. Desmond stood in the doorway a detached figure.

"You must love me, Frederic. You must be very, very fond of me, not for your father's sake but for mine. Then we shall be great friends, not antagonists."

He was helping her with her coat. "I confess I looked forward to you with a good deal of animosity," he said.

"But I shall not be a stepmother," she said quickly. Her eyes were serious for an instant, then filled with a luminous smile. "I shall be Yvonne to you, and you Frederic to me. Let it be so from the beginning."

"You are splendid!" he cried. "It's not going to be at all bad."

"I am sure you will like me," she said complacently.

Brood joined them at the fireside. "My dear, Mrs. Desmond will show you over the house when you are ready. You will be interested in seeing the old place. Later on I shall take you up to my secret hiding place, as they say in books. Ranjab will have the rooms in order by this evening. Where is your daughter, Mrs. Desmond?"

"She is at work on the catalogue, Mr. Brood, in the jade-room. In your last letter you instructed her to finish that—"

"But this is a holiday, Mrs. Desmond," said he, frowning. "Jones, will you ask Miss Lydia to join us for tea at half-past four?"

"You will adore Lydia," said Frederic to Mrs. Brood.

Apparently she did not hear him, for she gave no sign. She was looking about the room with eyes that seemed to take in everything.

"I am sure I shall be very happy in this dear old house," she said quietly. "Your own mother must have loved it, Frederic."

James Brood started. Unnoticed by the others, his fingers tightened on the gloves he carried in his hand.

"I never knew my mother," said the young man. "She died when I was a baby."

"But of course this was her home, was it not?"

"I don't know," said Frederic, uncomfortably. "I suppose so. I—I came here a few years ago and—"

"But even though you never knew her, there must still be something here that—that—how shall I say it? I mean, you must feel that she and you were here together years and years ago. One may never have seen his mother, yet he can always feel her. There is something—shall I say spiritual—in—"

Her husband broke in upon these unwelcome reflections. His voice was curiously harsh.

"Mrs. Desmond is waiting, Yvonne."

She drew herself up. "Are you in such great haste, Mrs. Desmond?" she asked in a voice that cut like a knife. Instinctively, she glanced at Frederic's face. She saw the muscles of the jaw harden and an angry light leap into his eyes. Instantly her arrogance fell away. "I beg your pardon, Mrs. Desmond. I have many bad habits. Now will you kindly show me to my room? I prefer that you and not of the servants should be my guide. Au revoir, Frederic. Till tea-time, James."

Her eyes were sparkling, her husky voice once more full of the appealing quality that could not be denied. The flush of injured pride faded from Mrs. Desmond's brow, and a faint look of surprise crept into her eyes. To her further amazement, the younger woman laid a hand upon her arm and gave it a gentle, friendly pressure.

The men watched them in silence as they left the room, side by side. A moment later they heard the soft laughter of the two women as they mounted the stairs together.

Frederic drew a long breath.

"She's splendid, father," he said, impulsively.

Brood's face was still clouded. He did not respond to the eager tribute.

Father and son faced each other. They were a striking pair, each in his way an example of fine, clean manhood. The father was taller by a couple of inches than the son, and yet Frederic was nearly six feet in his stockings. Both were spare men, erect and gracefully proportioned. Brood gave out the impression of great strength, of steel sinews, of invincible power; Frederic did not suggest physical strength and yet he was a clean-limbed, well-built fellow. He had a fine head, a slim body whose every movement proclaimed nervous energy, and a face that ... temperament of the most pronounced character. It was not a strong face, nor was it weak: it represented character without force.

On the other hand, James Brood's stern, handsome face was full of power. His grey eyes were keen, steady, compelling and seldom alight with warmth. His jaw was firm, square, relentless, and the lines that sank heavily into the flesh in his cheeks were put there not by age but by the very vigor of manhood. His hair was quite gray.

BOSTON WOOL

Boston, Mass., July 3.—The Commercial Bulletin says of the wool trade:

"London has rendered a verdict in favor of firm prices this week at the opening days of the sale, and the world has renewed its confidence in the future of the wool market. Sales here have been larger and prices are decidedly firm, while buying in the west continued at fully last week's prices. There has been an increased quantity of domestic wool (mostly territory) moved, but the bulk of the business is again in foreign wool."
